A Place Where Friends Can Gather The Spirit of Ireland, The Feeling of Home

The Brazen Head of Omaha, in its entirety, was established to emulate the rich tradition, which has made the authentic Irish pubs across Ireland famous. Thus, we chose the oldest and most revered pub in Dublin as our paradigm. The Brazen Head on Bridge Street was for centuries the site of much plotting and intrigue as revolutionaries of different eras found it a safe haven in which to conspire. Robert Emmet, Daniel O'Connell and Tim Healy, among others, drank and planned within its ancient walls.

The original establishment was built in 1198 A.D. at the head of the River Liffey.

On cold dark nights soldiers would warm their hands over barrels of fire called "brazers." With this in mind, they named the Dublin-based hotel/pub

The Brazen Head, due to both its location at the head of the river and the soldiers' use of the brazers.

The bar you see today at the Brazen Head of Omaha was carefully designed in Dublin and built in Wexford, Ireland. It was then shipped to Omaha where it creates the essential ambiance and atmosphere of a true Irish Pub.
